STOPPED BY JAP VESSELS

The four-masted American barkentine, James Tuft arrived in port yesterday from Hakodate, Japan, with a partial cargo of 1450 tons of sulphur. Although she sailed through the heart of the war zone she escaped the thrilling incidents that have made the passages of some of the other ships on this run strenuous. On her way from Kiso Chau to Hakodate the Tuft was stopped by a Japanese torpedo boat and later by a cruiser, but Captain Friedberg had no trouble in convincing them of his neutrality, especially as he was bound for a Japanese port.

The vessel arrived at Hakodate a few days after the Vladivostok fleet passed through the straits on its way back from the raid. There was but very little excitement, although the departure of troops for the front was the cause of a celebration. The captain had seen a warning in a Chinese paper to the effect that the harbor of Hakodate was mined, so he did not get into the same scrape that the Annie E. Small did at Nagasaki.

Nothing was sighted on the voyage across the Pacific and the weather that the Tuft experienced was "too good," as the captain remarked. Calms were encountered on the whole voyage. The ship left Hakodate on the 11th of August, so the passage was not excessively long. She is moored at Railway Wharf No. 1 and will begin unloading early this week.

MANY ISLAND BOATS ARRIVE

Quite a fleet of island steamers made port yesterday morning, although otherwise the harbor was very dull. The W. G. Hall got in from Kauai ports early in the morning. She had a fair passenger list and a cargo consisting of 60 bags taro, 30 empty wine casks, 7 boxes oranges, 1 sheep and 35 packages sundries. Purser Frietrip reported the steamer Mikahala at Eleese discharging. She will commence loading K. S. M. sugar today. There was fine weather on Kauai, and light trades and smooth seas were experienced crossing the channel.

The Kauai arrived from Maui ports at 4:30 a. m. with 6000 bags of sugar and 37 packages sundries. She reported the steamer Mauna Loa at Punaluu loading. There were light rains on the Hamakua coast accompanied by thunder and lightning. Light trades and smooth seas crossing the channel. The Noeau arrived from Kauai ports at 7:20 a. m. with no cargo. From Maui ports came the Claudine with a fair passenger list and the following cargo: 76 sacks corn, 222 sacks bone, 2 horses, 6 mules, 59 hogs and 230 packages sundries. The Likeli arrived from her regular run at 4 a. m.
